INTRODUCTION

PURPOSE OF THE GUIDE

The statutory duties and responsibilities of county government officials in Texas are numerous. They range from mandatory requirements pertaining to essential public functions to optional authority to carry out discretionary activities. Responsibilities of county officials are found throughout the Texas Constitution, Texas Revised Civil Statutes Annotated, and the various codes, including the Local Government Code, Agriculture Code, Election Code, Government Code, Natural Resources Code, Family Code, Tax Code, Parks and Wildlife Code, Water Code, and Business and Commerce Code. Some applicable laws were enacted before 1900. However, many statutory responsibilities have been added or redefined during recent legislative sessions.

This guide is a compilation of current statutes affecting the administration and operation of the principal county offices. While the compilation informs county officials about the more important statutes affecting their offices, it is primarily intended to provide them with a convenient reference source for questions regarding the scope of their individual duties.

While most of the referenced statutes apply to officials of all counties, actual county operations vary according to population, geographic location, and other factors. For example, larger counties may provide a broader range of programs pertaining to human resources and economic development. Also, counties along the Gulf Coast have some powers not granted to other counties. Thus, county officials in some counties have responsibilities that their counterparts in other counties do not have.

FOCUS OF THE GUIDE

While this guide is comprehensive, it does not list every statute that may affect county government. The document is intended primarily as a quick reference guide for county officials. Its main focus is a description of the office and the administrative duties associated with it. Therefore, the statutes included are those directed at the particular county official, or which enunciate a distinct duty, responsibility, or condition affecting the office. Financial, personnel, public welfare, and ministerial responsibilities were emphasized. Statutes that were not generally included were those pertaining to criminal law enforcement and the judiciary. (An exception was made for the justice of the peace, since the main duties of this officer are judicial in nature.) Therefore, statutory responsibilities and laws affecting county offices listed in the Penal Code, Code of Criminal Procedure, and Rules of Civil Procedure are generally not included.

Also, population bracket laws that apply only to counties in a specific population category were generally not included.

For each office, the various duties were divided into general categories, indicated by descriptive sentences. Then, categories were separated by subject groupings, indicated by spacing. Similar statutes relating to different county officers were not always located under the same category. Some categories were combined for the sake of brevity. The approach was to identify a function or responsibility, not to record the statute in total. Consequently, the statutes were summarized as briefly as possible. Mandatory duties were summarized as briefly as possible. Mandatory duties were indicated, wherever possible, by "shall" or "must." Discretionary duties, or duties directed at more than one officer, were indicated by "may." A short narrative description of each office precedes the listing of responsibilities.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS COURT

The commissioners court is the governing body of the county. The Texas Constitution specifies that the courts consist of a county judge and four county commissioners elected by the qualified voters of individual commissioners precincts. The county judge is the presiding officer of the county commissioners court. The court has the authority to divide the county into four individual commissioners' precincts. The court shall exercise powers over county business as provided by law (Tex. Const. Art. V, Sec. 18).

Many state administrative responsibilities rest with the court as well as a growing number of permissive authorities. The Local Government Code contains many of the provisions that guide the commissioners court in carrying out its responsibilities for the operation of county government. For example, the Code covers the duties and authority of the commissioners court and other officers related to financial management, public officers and employees, regulatory matters, property acquisition, buildings, and many other areas of county affairs. Another important statute concerning the commissioners court is Chapter 81 of the Local Government Code, which sets out the following responsibilities and powers:

- ◆ Establish public ferries where required.
- ◆ Lay out and establish, change, and discontinue public roads.
- ◆ Build bridges and keep them in repair.
- ◆ Appoint road overseers and apportion hands.
- ◆ Exercise general control over all roads, highways, ferries, and bridges.
- ◆ Provide for the support of paupers.
- ◆ Provide for burial of paupers.
- ◆ Acquire property necessary to obtain a surface water supply or to transport and deliver surface water.

Numerous other statutes augment the above grants of authority. To provide an index to the multiplicity of activities of the county commissioners court, the following compilation of statutes summarizes general responsibilities and lists statutory authorizations for each function of the court.

DUTY/RESPONSIBILITY	AUTHORITY
1. ROADS AND BRIDGES
A major area of responsibility for the county commissioners court is construction and maintenance of roads and bridges in the county that are not part of the state highway system. More than 50 counties have their own road and bridge acts, which control when in conflict with general law. When these acts are silent on a subject, then the general law is effective.

COUNTY JUDGE

The county judge is both presiding officer of the commissioners court (Tex. Const. Art. V, Sec. 18) and judge of the county court (Tex. Const. Art. V, Sec. 15). As such, the judge is often thought of as the chief executive officer of the county.

The duties of the county judge vary depending on the population of the county. In most rural counties, the judge has broad judicial responsibilities and is often the principal source of information and assistance.

The judge's duties as part of the commissioners court are detailed in the section on the court. It is incumbent upon the judge, as presiding officer of the commissioners court, to carefully abide by statutes requiring that meetings of governmental bodies be open to the public. Additional specific statutory charges are enumerated in the following: elections, finance, bonds and sureties, court operations, mental health, special districts, and general administration.

COUNTY TAX ASSESSOR-COLLECTOR

The tax assessor-collector is a constitutionally required office for counties over 10,000 population (Tex. Const. Art. VIII, Sec. 14). In smaller counties the office may be created by a majority of the voters, or, as is the case in some Texas counties, the sheriff may perform the duties (Tex. Const. Art. VIII, Sec. 16, 16a).

In the past, the tax assessor-collector determined the value of property and collected taxes within the county. This office could also contract with other governmental units to perform the same services. However, effective on January 1, 1982, state law required that counties participate in a single appraisal district (Tex. Const. Art. VIII, Sec. 18). Under the revision, many duties regarding property taxes which were performed by the county tax assessor-collector, such as appraisal, became duties of the office of the chief appraiser of the districts. Currently, the county tax assessor-collector is to assess and collect taxes on property in the county for the county and, under certain conditions, for another taxing unit (Tax Code Sec. 6.23).

Tax assessor-collector functions under Texas Tax Code, as enacted in 1979 and amended in later years, are enumerated on the following pages. Also listed are the office's responsibilities for motor vehicle registration, voter registration, and other taxing and financial duties.

SHERIFF

Sheriff is a constitutionally created office with duties to be prescribed by the legislature (Tex. Const. Art. V, Sec. 23). The sheriff is the chief law enforcement officer for the county and is responsible for operating the county jails, investigating crimes, enforcing judgments, and maintaining communications with other law enforcement organizations. The sheriff has countywide jurisdiction, but in practice, most sheriff departments concentrate their activities outside city limits where municipal officers cannot operate. Counties may have a substantial staff and budget. The sheriff is elected every four years and is responsible for security in both the county and district courts. The sheriff also sets bail bond policy for the county except where there is a Bail Bond Board, which establishes the rules and regulations for making bail by bondsmen.

Constitutionally, sheriffs in counties of less than 10,000 population serve as tax assessor-collector (Art. VIII, Sec. 16) unless the voters elect to keep the jobs separate. In several Texas counties the sheriff is also the tax assessor-collector and carries those additional responsibilities.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE

The justice of the peace is elected for a term of four years from each justice precinct in the county (a precinct may have more than one justice of the peace). The justice of the peace is the presiding officer of the justice court and the small claims court. The justice of the peace has jurisdiction over minor misdemeanor offenses (Class C), and in civil matters where the amount in controversy does not exceed $10,000. A variety of civil process, as well as arrest and search warrants, can be issued by the justice of the peace. The justice of the peace also sits as judge of the small claims courts, in actions for the recovery of money, which does not exceed $10,000.

The justice of the peace may also preside over hearings pertaining to suspension of driver licenses and conduct other hearings and inquests. The justice of the peace may conduct marriage ceremonies and serves as ex officio notary public for the precinct. The justice of the peace has administrative and financial duties concerning the keeping of records and fee and expense reports.

In November 1983, voters approved a constitutional amendment authorizing fewer justices of the peace in certain counties. The number of precincts in each county will be determined by the population according to the most recent federal census. The amendment of Article V, Section 18 of the Texas Constitution took effect January 1, 1984.

In addition, a manual on justice court procedures is published by the Justice Court Training Center at Southwest Texas State University, San Marcos, Texas.

CONSTABLE

The constable is elected to a constitutionally created office (Tex. Const. Art. V, Sec. 18) for four years within each justice precinct. The constable is an authorized peace officer and is the chief process server of the justice court. The constable has statewide jurisdiction to execute any criminal process, and countywide jurisdiction to execute any civil process. The constable may also execute process issued by some state agencies.

The constable also has duties related to keeping accounts of the financial transactions of the office and is responsible for property seized or money collected by court order.

In November 1983, voters approved a constitutional amendment authorizing fewer constable precincts in certain counties. The number of justice of the peace and constable precincts in each county is to be determined by the population according to the most recent federal census. The amendment of Article V, Section 18 of the Texas Constitution took effect January 1, 1984.

COUNTY ATTORNEY

The county attorney is elected from each county in which there is not resident criminal district attorney. A county attorney serves a term of four years. The duties of the county and district attorney may frequently coincide. In some counties, the county attorney is the chief prosecuting officer for the county courts. The county attorney usually handles only criminal misdemeanor cases, as well as civil suits affecting the county and other matters such as child support cases, revocation of probation, bond forfeitures, and commitment proceedings. The district attorney prosecutes felony cases in district court and represents state agencies, when requested to do so by the Attorney General's Office, in initiating court proceedings. However, this division of duties may vary; the district attorney may prosecute misdemeanor cases, and a county attorney may appear in district court.

The county attorney is the chief legal advisor to the county. The county attorney's office generally handles county requests for legal opinions from the Attorney General's Office. The county attorney may also represent the county in suits affecting payment of taxes and eminent domain.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY

The district attorney is elected from a judicial district for four years. The district attorney is primarily an attorney for the state and attends the state district court, although not exclusively. The district attorney may represent various state agencies when the Attorney General does not do so. In addition, the district attorney may assist the Attorney General's Office in enforcing the rule and regulations of state agencies and the conduct of state officials (for example, the Public Integrity Unit in Travis County).

In some counties, the duties of the district attorney are centered primarily on prosecution of felony criminal offenses; in others, the district attorney may be responsible for civil suits concerning the state, as well as misdemeanor offenses. The district attorney also has an advisory function in regard to county and state officials. The various statutes regulating the prosecuting and judicial duties of the district attorney, as well as the court-related functions regarding state agencies, are outside the scope of this guide.
